Our World: A Geographic Investigation

Unit Nine Standards

"EAST ASIA"

Here's what we will work together to explore, understand, and be able to do in this unit:

1. Locate, label, and identify, on a regional map, the main physical, political, and man-made features of East Asia. (See cartography application activity = 'regional mapping' = for specific requirements)
2. Compare the major landforms of East Asia and describe the major climate zones and major natural resources of the region.
3. Analyze the factors that have influenced East Asian thought and describe the political systems of the region.
4. Identify and discuss the major languages and religions/ philosophies of the region.
5. Explain how Chinese culture has influenced other parts of East Asia.
6. Describe how Chinese geography and history have contributed to the idea of it being a mysterious country to the Western world.
7. Identify factors that have affected standards of living in East Asia, as well as explaining how rapid population growth affects a developing country.
8. Describe the transportation networks of East Asia and explain the different degrees of government control over mass communication in the region.
9. Identify the problems that have resulted from East Asia's emergence as an exporting power and discuss the importance of maintaining good trade relations with other countries, particularly the US.
10. Discuss human rights as they pertain to China and Tibet.
11. Identify and explain the "critical issues" challenging the region of East Asia.

BRIGHT IDEA!

= A suggested study and organizational technique...

At the conclusion of every unit, students should staple all unit work to the unit standards/calendar, resulting in a final exam study guide, as well as a complete semester portfolio entry.
